Cell membranes control the passage of substances

Diffusion moves particles from high to low concentration.

Active transport requires energy from ATP

Protein pumps move ions across the membrane.

Osmosis is the movement of water across a selectively permeable membrane.